Chinese folklore has it that the Three Immortals disguised themselves as beggars to test the kindness of forest animals.

A fox and monkey shared their food, while the rabbit, with only grass to offer, selflessly offered itself as a sacrifice.

Amazed by its gesture, the Three Immortals asked the Emperor of Heaven to resurrect and honour the rabbit.

The rabbit was then given a home in Moon Palace, where it accompanied the immortal maiden Chang E, and helped to make the elixir of life.
